What You'll Find in Tsuchiura

Scenically located on the west shore of Lake Kasumigaura, Japan's second-broadest lake, and the southern face of Mt. Tsukuba, one of the most famous peaks in the Kanto region, Tsuchiura is the gateway to Suigo-Tsukuba Quasi-national Park.

As such it is blessed with both the panoramic beauty of Lake Kasumigaura and the abundant natural wonders of the slopes of Mt. Tsukuba.

Tsuchiura arose as a castle town in the early Edo period. Today, particularly in the vicinity of Tsuchiura Castle ruin, Tsuchiura maintains much of the atmosphere of a feudal-era castle town.

The city was ideally located as both a land and sea transportation hub. It lay on the old Mito Highway linking Edo (modern Tokyo) with the city of Mito and was located at the junction for the water-borne traffic on Lake Kasumigaura.

Today Tsuchiura is redolent with the history and culture of a city that prospered as a commercial center.

A glimpse of History

There is the saying "the Toki-no-Taiko and the Seki-no-teppo are renowned in Tsuchiura". Seki-no-teppo refers to the Sekiryu school of firearm use of the Tsuchiura clan that established the harquebus technique.

Toki-no-Taiko ("Time Drum") was installed in the Edo period at the turret gate of Tsuchiura Castle and had been used to indicate the time of day to the castle town. While the teaching of the Sekiryu school today forms an unbroken tradition, examples of a turret gate with a drum are rare. The two articles that represent the Tsuchiura clan in the Edo period further adds charm to the castle town.

The Story of Tsuchiura Curry

The Tsuchiura Navy Air Service and the relation of Tsuchiura Curry to the Graf Zeppelin

In the 1920s, the Tsuchiura Navy Air Service was established for naval aviation cadet training. At the time the Japanese Navy's organization was modeled after the British Royal Navy, even including the British tradition of having curry every Friday. One function of this weekly curry night was to keep sailors from losing a sense of the days of the week during long spells at sea. It was also highly popular with the crewmen.

About 80 years ago, Kasumigaura received a remarkable visitor: the Graf Zeppelin landed here during its historic world-first round-the-world flight. The crew of the 236.6m airship was treated to curry made with the local potatoes, which were renowned for their flavor.

The city later explored ideas to raise Tsuchiura's domestic profile that culminated in the "Tsuchiura Curry Tales". Tsuchiura now has 26 locations in and around the city for enjoying the original curry .

Kamitakatsu Shell Midden History Plaza

● 上高津貝塚 ふるさと歴史の広場

The Kamitakatsu Shell Midden is the largest ancient mound of discarded shells on the shores of Lake Kasumigaura, built about 3000 to 4000 years ago. Declared a National Historical Relic in 1977, in 1997 it was opened to the public as Kamitakatsu Shell Midden History Plaza, a 5-hectare historical-artifact museum. This plaza includes an exhibit of a cross-section of the shell midden and a recreation of a pit dwelling of the era. In the archeological archive, visitors can view artifacts unearthed at excavation sites around Tsuchiura, such as kitchen middens and warrior burial mounds. The scenery blends with the neighboring Shishizuka wetlands, creating an ideal vantage point for reflecting on both history and nature.
